SPEAKER

Audrey Bracey Deegan

Topic

StepByStep Worldwide

StepByStep was founded by Audrey Bracey Deegan based on the notion that an integrated series of interventions that give children a healthy start in their first three years of life can jumpstart the well-being of a whole community. After years working in corporate and government roles, engaging in development largely through board and client activity, Audrey decided to go back to her roots in international development and meld her experience in program, strategy and community-based change to rethink how services are delivered in the last mile. It was from that shift in thinking that StepByStep was born.

She worked most recently with tomato farmer associations in Tanzania to improve profitability and growth; a health and education NGO in Haiti to expand and deepen its impact in remote locations; and a global youth organization to bolster its fundraising skills and capacity. She is an honors graduate of Princeton University with a bachelor's degree in international politics, and holds a joint J.D./Masters in Foreign Service degree from Georgetown University, where she is also an adjunct professor in international business strategy.

Our May speaker

Thomas Meur spoke to us about Mauritius's disappearing heritage: not only buildings, but also the skills associated with them. He deplored the lack of vision of so many Mauritians who are keen to demolish the old to build Smart Cities when even places like Singapore now realise the importance of protecting not just historic buildings but also the countryside and coastline from ever-encroaching development, much of it not in harmony with its surroundings. There are the beginnings of a movement to protect our beaches from more hotels, and to maintain those few historical buildings that are left, but it is still an uphill struggle and time is of the essence.

May Book Club

The Book Club met on Monday, 21st May at Lisa's home to discuss "Hum If You Don't Know the Words" by Bianca Marais. Set in 1976, the book relates the experiences of a little white girl, Robin, and an older black woman, Beauty, during apartheid South Africa. It is a story of how their lives come together after the historic Soweto Uprising and the close bond they forge in the aftermath of their loss and grief. Though the subject matter includes loss, grief, racism and prejudice in all its forms, there is a balance throughout between the humorous scenes and the weighty topics. As the author pointed out in a recent interview, South African people, regardless of race, language or religion, are very humorous people who love to laugh. It was her experience that the poorer and more deprived the community, the more they laugh.

The author, who was born in South Africa, was a baby in 1976 and being looked after by a black caregiver, Eunice, whom she loved. Although the plot is fictional, much of the interaction between the two characters is based on her own experiences growing up and being taken care of by Eunice.

Well received by members, we were extremely fortunate to have Lisa's valuable input since she lived in South Africa during that time. The book is recommended as an interesting read.

Scrumptious snacks were provided by Lisa and Audrey, which sustained us through later conversations covering HIV, health and social considerations in both Kenya and Tanzania. We also heard of Lisa's participation in Moonwalk, the breast cancer charity night walk in London, braving the cool weather in bra and raincoat – Lisa did not walk alone, she was accompanied by her husband, Francois, also sporting an interesting bra and raincoat! A worthy cause - well done Lisa and Francois.

News from Home and Abroad

On a sad note, Heather passed on the news that Jackie Bisnauthsing died on 19 May, following a long battle against cancer. Jackie was a member of Corona for a number of years; a physiotherapist - she was the speaker at the AGM in 2009. Jackie and family returned to the UK about 8 years ago.

And we also remember Veronica Murphy, an indefatigable committee member, who died in May and whose funeral will be in Sevenoaks on 4 June.

Lisa Maurel and the Moon walk

I decided to join The London Moonwalk this year for the first time, it raises money for Breast Cancer awareness, research and charities, a cause close to my heart. It takes place every May with a marathon, or half-marathon, wending its way through central London in the middle of the night. Every year it is on a different route. It is a walk, running not allowed, and the reason it takes place at night is that it would be extraordinarily expensive to block the central London traffic...so the traffic continues and there were volunteers on every crossing to direct the walkers, and volunteers dispensing water, collecting rubbish, cheering the walkers on. The organization was impressive. The idea is that you walk in a bra, men too...they get breast cancer too! My husband bravely joined me and our walkers' kits, including our bras, were despatched from London to Mauritius. The theme this year was Wild West and everyone was expected to decorate the bras accordingly, some were in full scale costume, inflatable horses, cowgirl outfits, even cow outfits! My bra was easy but as I had ordered a 42DD for my husband, thinking he could put sandwiches, gloves, torch etc in there, his was much more difficult!

We did the half marathon though the walk was actually 15.1 miles, an extra 2 miles for some reason, and unfortunately it was a very cold night with temperatures down to 7 degrees so, though there were a few brave souls who wore just the bra, most of us covered up as much as possible leaving just our cowboy hats visible. We started at 11.15 pm and arrived, cold and tired, at 5.15 the following morning, saying never again...however, after a good English breakfast and on a high, next year is a distinct possibility! We raised a good sum in sponsorship and with 15 000 walkers this must be a good boost for the Charity.

Bravo, to Lisa and her husband - a wonderful achievement for an excellent cause!

DID YOU KNOWBANANAS?

Cavendish bananas were named after William Cavendish, 6th Duke of Devonshire. He received a shipment of bananas from Mauritius from the chaplain of Alton Towers. His gardener, Joseph Paxton, then cultivated them in the greenhouses of Chatsworth House. These were then shipped off to various places in the Caribbean around the 1850s. Between 1998 and 2000, Cavendish bananas accounted for 47% of global banana production, and the vast majority of bananas entering international trade. (Wikipedia)
